

Picture: adapted from pixabay

Why is the afternoon tea so common in Anglophone communities?

The afternoon tea has been a very common activity in the British Royal family's life for many years. It became common in 1840, because there was not any meal between lunch and dinner. Then people in England started to drink the afternoon tea and invite their friends to join this new meal. This tradition is similar to our afternoon snack. Along the years, the afternoon tea has become popular in many Anglophone communities.

Source of the text: www.historic-uk.com

Further information: <https://afternoontea.co.uk/information/history-of-afternoon-tea/>

By Simone Freire de Araujo (TEAM member). Feb 6, 2020.

